Allen Dulles, former director of the United States Central Intelligence Agency, made the following statement in a recent national television broadcast:

"The Communists have tried to sell their propaganda and unfortunately they have succeeded in many cases. They have placed their propaganda first in their own countries, then in their own publications and radio and other ways. Then it is picked up by leftist journals, and then it is broadcast more and more respectably until you find people quoting Communist propaganda, some- times maybe without knowing what they are doing."
